HUGH F. HARVEY DIES AT HIS HOME HERE

Was Lifelong Resident of Capital and Identified With Many Organizations.

Hugh F. Harvey, a lifelong resident of Washington, and who for years had been prominently identified with civic and fraternal organizations here, died at 129 o'clock this morning at his home, 2301 Pennsylvania avenue. He was in his fiftieth year.

Mr. Harvey had been ill for ten days, but his family and friends had felt no concern as to his recovery until late Monday evening when his condition suddenly became worse, and he continued to sink until the end at 1:30 this morning. Death was due to heart weakness following renal complications. He was survived by a widow, who was Miss Gene Gaynor, of Virginia, and a daughter, Anne.

Mr. Harvey's family had lived for four generations in the District, the deceased having succeeded his father and grandfather in the retail liquor business here. For many years he took an active part in the national and local liquor question, and was identified with the trade organizations both in Washington and throughout the country at large in their efforts to secure aversive laws for the licensing and controlling the sale of liquor.

Mr. Harvey was one of the organizers of the West End Citizens' Association, and served in the various offices of that organization. He as-isted in the formation of the Retail Liquor League of the District, and in the National Retail Liquor Dealers' association of America, acting for years as chairman of the legislative committee of that body. He was also secretary of the Mercantile association of the District, and was a member of the Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Harvey was a prominent member of the District Lodge of Elks, and a member of the Order of Eagles, and the Fraternal Union of Men.

Funeral services will be at St.
Stephen's at 9 o'clock Friday morning when high mass will be said. Interment will be in the family lot at Hollywood cemetery, Georgetown.

STORM OF ABUSE FALLS ON HALDANE

His Plea to Prepare for "War After the War" Is Resented By English Press.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Lord Haldane's reappearance in the public light when he addressed the House of Commons yesterday has brought forth a storm of abuse, the fiercest of which was heaped on the former lord high chancellor at the outbreak of the war.

Lord Haldane's unfortunate expression of opinion in the House of Commons during the first few months of hostilities has been the subject of a series of attacks. The postscript of one of the attacks in the cabinet going to the former lord high chancellor strong protests were heard yesterday. He had been in the cabinet for a while, but they have now resumed their campaign against him.

Lord Haldane is blamed for a "patriotic" description. A particularly violent attack has been made on him this week by Charles Palmer, a well-known political writer in London. Mr. Palmer's attack is entitled "Watch Haldane." Extracts from his article follow: "The most sinister figures of our time. He deliberately deceived the nation about Germany; he played the game of Germany with a cold, calculating, and unscrupulous disregard of British interests, for which in sterner, honest times as lord chancellor, keeper of the king's conscience, he would have been impeached."

"Yet today he has the brazen effrontery of the lawyer-politician to let-ture about the future, those he duped and deceived, and once more to praise the land which has spawned the monster. It was loudly proclaimed that my Lord Haldane had learned anything of the dignity of that wool-sack he ought never to have sat upon he would forever blot his name from the annals of British statesmen."

"Until the peers rid their roll of renegade dukes they will have to endure the presence of the miserable man whose blind affection for the Kaiser and his cruel hordes silenced his lips when he should have uttered words of warning. But his offense is even greater than that of the men nursed in this land, the dukes of Albany and Cumberland, who have been given to the Kaiser the Evil One of Europe. He knew; he suspected what was to come. Yet he remained silent. Had he spoken, had Germany been made to understand that we should stand by our friends, there would have been no war. Which crime is the greater, the crime of going against your own people in war or the crime of remaining silent, and so making war inevitable? Let it be remembered, Lord Haldane is that most dangerous of types—the vainglorious politician. He imagines that he is essential to the King's government, and he will make every effort, aided by certain members of the cabinet obsessed with their own ambition for power and influence, to keep the man, to regain power and influence.
There is a danger greater than the danger of war—the danger of peace.
The nation must be on its guard.
Watch this man—watch Haldane—lest he creeps through the doors of Downing street and is allowed to hold a watching brief when the day of the great reckoning comes. We know that in times past he has been the right hand of Sir Edward Grey—he has had a testimonial from the prime minister hardly less enthusiastic and had Germany been given to that splendid patriot Sir Edgar Speyer, who flung his English honors in the face of the King."

"The man who went up and down the country telling the people that Germany was our friend, that the Kaiser was our friend, that the most serious crime is the crime of the man who laughed at the very thought of war, and scoffed at Lord Roberts for his 'anatomical warnings'—wants to have a finger in the pie of peace, and he is kept out of every public office, for he is a danger to our imperial well-being."

Senator Jones of Washington yesterday spoke in the Senate in protest against discrimination by the Government against foreign-born citizens in the matter of employment.

Senator Jones recently introduced a resolution directing the Secretary of War to send to the Senate copies of all orders issued in the last three years directing the employment of foreign-born citizens or discrimination against them in the service of the army.

He denounced the policy of the Administration, and declared it had done more to destroy undivided American-ism than any other agency. He denounced, too, an order of the Secretary of War discharging certain men from the service of the mine planter Ringgold solely because they were foreign born.

Mrs. Florence B. Hilles, Woman Orator, Sees G.O.P. Victory in Colorado

MRS. FLORENCE BAYARD HILLES.

Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, daughter of former Secretary of State Bayard, who has been campaigning in Colorado for the Woman's party, is in Washington today, en route to her home in Delaware. She brought encouraging reports to leaders here of progress of the campaign in Colorado against the Democrats, and stated that everywhere she had been told by Democratic women that they would vote against their party because of its failure to enact the Federal suffrage amendment. In Colorado Mrs. Hilles was working with Dr. Margaret Long, daughter of former Secretary of the Navy Long.

State headquarters for the Woman's party was opened in Denver just before Mrs. Hilles left for the East.
Mrs. Hilles will spend a short while at her home and attend to some business details, after which she will return to Colorado and resume campaign work.

'Paralysis Monkeys' Regain Use of Limbs

Secret Experiment Made at State Laboratories Closely Watched.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Monkeys suffering with infantile paralysis that have been undergoing a secret treatment for the disease at the State laboratories in this city are recovering. One of two animals, both of which were completely paralyzed several days ago, is slowly recovering the use of all its limbs. The other monkey will apparently be paralyzed in one leg. This treatment, because it is purely of experimental character and is being closely guarded, is the latest activity on the part of the State health authorities to discover some preventive for the disease that yesterday resulted in two deaths and eleven new cases in this city.

In order to safeguard the children of school age of this city from all danger it was decided yesterday at a conference of health officials and members of the elementary schools committee of the board of education to postpone the opening of all high and elementary and parochial schools in the city until October 2. Director Krusen, in whose office the meeting was held, announced that on September 1 another conference would be held, at which time it would be decided whether the colleges and universities in this city should be opened to students more than sixteen years of age.

The experiment at the State laboratories with the two monkeys, because it so far has shown results along the lines toward which the men of science are hoping to be enlightened, is proving a source of much encouragement to Dr. Dixon, State health commissioner, and his assistants. But they say frankly that even should the new treatment work out successfully on these two animals, it would have to be connected and continued successfully many times before they would be willing to acknowledge that they have arrived at anything definite in the way of a preventive for the disease.

For the Burglars.

German Consul Kurt Ziegler said at a dinner in Denver:
"To be sure, the German onslaught remind me of Potts."
"A lady said to Potts' wife:
"I hear, Mrs. Potts, that your husband bought three revolvers and a gun for any burglar who might call." "He did," said Mrs. Potts, "and they called last week and took them."—Ex-

St. John Gaffney Home, In Rage at President

Fellow-Passengers Say Former American Consul Expressed the Wish That He Had Torpedoed the Lusitania.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Thomas St.
John Gaffney, former American consul general at Munich, Germany, who was invited to remain by the State Department last September following charges that he had shown pro-German par-tisanism, returned from Germany on the Scandinavian-American liner Frederik VIII yesterday, with a consignment of denunciations.

He handed out a typewritten tirade against the British officials who searched him at Kirkwall, let off some verbal shot against the Wilson Administration as "pro-English," and scored a report emanating from passengers that he said he wished he'd torpedoed the Lusitania himself.

Some of Mr. Gaffney's fellow-passengers told of an incident that occurred at Kirkwall on August 23, which they considered the climax of Mr. Gaffney's explosions. Among those who vouched for the incident was William J. Pike, American consul general at Coburg, Germany, and John G. Simon, representative of Rice & Hutchins, Boston shoe manufacturers.

Lusitania Incident.

Mr. Simon said that after the talk had turned on Zeppelin raids, of which Mr. Gaffney expressed approval, he asserted the raids were in the same class of barbaric acts as the torpedoing of the Lusitania. Mr. Gaffney then jumped to his feet, according to Mr. Simon, and exclaimed:
"I wish I had been the man who fired the shot that started the Lusitania on her way to the bottom of the Atlantic." Thereupon the attitude of other men who were standing near it was said, became threatening toward the ex-consul. Later at the speaking, where he is staying, a contingent of reporters who had vainly waited for Mr. Gaffney to put in an appearance finally reached him by room telephone and asked him if he had been correctly reported concerning this utterance. Mr. Gaffney replied:

"I have been grossly misrepresented.
I have an engagement this evening.
Good-by."

Search at Kirkwall.

Mr. Gaffney's statement, handed out at the pier, which dealt with his treatment at Kirkwall, set forth that the British authorities, who knew he had been one of the last men to see Sir Roger Casement before the latter left Germany for Ireland, went through his baggage, removed his papers and private effects from the ship, and even inspected the workroom of his state room.

He declared that he was deprived of two bonds, valued at $500 each, issued by the Wisconsin Electric Company.
Mr. Gaffney said he intended to file a protest with the State Department, but appeared pessimistic about obtaining any action, since "the atmosphere of the White House is viciously pro-British."

"I attribute my removal," he added, "to the fact that President Wilson is an assiduous reader of the London Times and the Post, which print stories about me. So many American diplomats have inhaled the atmosphere of the White House that the service has become pro-British."

Mr. Gaffney planned yesterday to make arrangements with the Hughes forces to start a speaking tour on behalf of the Republican candidate.

is engraved in solid rock beside the carved the name in the rock with a
